OVERVIEW

The MA Program in International Relations is an interdisciplinary program designed to improve understanding of theoretical debates and practical applications of this discipline. It aims to link theory and practice with a focus on approaches, methodologies and policy practices in international relations.

For this purpose, the program encourages and promotes:

- Analyses of planning and practice of International Politics in Turkey and the world,
- Analyses of regional, inter-governmental and international organisations to understand their development and functions,
- Analyses of bureaucratic structure, policy making processes, agent-structure relations and interaction of domestic actors and foreign policy in international relations,
- Discovery of roots, debates and new discussions on the theory of international relations.

AIM AND SCOPE

The MA Program in International Relations aims to train future leaders of International Relations and take a leading role in following the new global educational trends and adopting a novel program in this area of study.

CAREER PERSPECTIVE

Graduates of the MA Program in International Relations would seek jobs at:

- Foreign Policy Bureaucracy: Ministry of Foreign Affairs, National Development Agencies, Foreign Relations Offices of State Institutions,
- International Organizations: A wider range of international organizations ranging from United Nations to World Health Organization,
- International NGOs: Humanitarian NGOs, Peacebuilding Organizations and Charity Organizations.
- Multinational Companies,
